

Director Compensation Advisory Services

The Current Compensation Environment

Say-on-pay, increasing shareholder pressure, enhanced disclosure rules, globalization, and an uncertain economy make navigating compensation strategy and design complex. Particularly challenging is designing and structuring pay programs in today's environment of increased transparency and demand for pay and performance alignment.

Today's directors' roles and responsibilities have never been so vital and are critical to investors' belief in the current and future success of an organization. Directors are no longer just advisors, nor are they just compliance officers; they are both assets of the firm and shepherds of shareholder interest.

Pearl Meyer understands the roles and responsibilities of directors.
